OHCA and OSU-OKC launch Certified Nurse's Aide Training

In collaboration with various state agencies focusing on quality initiatives for long term care facilities, the Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA) announced its joint partnership with Oklahoma State University-Oklahoma City (OSU-OKC) in the development, training and administration of a pilot program for long-term care facility (LTCF) certified nurse aides that began May 1, 2005.

“Oklahoma’s long term care facilities have long struggled with a manpower shortage,” said OHCA Chief Executive Officer Mike Fogarty. “We believe this program is an important step in helping Medicaid facilities in their quest to provide enduring quality care to their residents.”

This training program is available at no cost for Oklahoma and Logan county residents entering the training program, earning certification and gaining employment at an Oklahoma Medicaid LTCF for at least twelve months. OSU-OKC is hiring a full-time program coordinator to assist solely in recruitment and outreach to potential program candidates.

“We are very excited to be participating in this new program,” said Dr. Mike DeLong, OSU-OKC academic affairs associate vice-president. “We hope to meet the challenges of direct care workforce shortages and develop a certified nurse training program that serves to deliver quality staff and enhance continuity of care,” he said.

OHCA staff, along with other agencies, will track various outcomes related to the effectiveness of the program, areas for improvement, and challenges for future program expansion. Program expansion will be considered in 2006.

“Agency staff will conduct surveys, coordinate focus groups, and perform on-site observations in addition to other data-gathering methods throughout the many phases of the program cycle, ranging from identifying training barriers to employment issues, such as transportation, recruitment and retention,” said Teri Dalton, Projects Manager at the OHCA. “We are firmly committed to building enduring quality care for residents,” she said.
